SCOPUS, SINTA, GOOGLE SCHOLAR, LIBGEN, SCIHUB

What is an academic journal?

- Academic journals are periodicals in which researchers publish articles on their work.
- Most often these articles discuss recent research.
- Journals also publish theoretical discussions and articles that critically review already published work.
- Academic journals are typically peer-reviewed journals.
- Some, but not all, search engines that search for periodical sources identify whether or not the sources are from peer-reviewed publications
